Howard Siegel joined Moses Singer as a Partner in 2007. He is a Co-Chair of the Banking and Finance practice group. He regularly advises financial institutions and borrowers in connection with structuring and documenting complex corporate and financing transactions in a wide variety of industries, including energy, manufacturing, real estate and healthcare. His areas of focus include syndicated and bilateral, domestic and international receivable purchase, draft discounting and supplier finance transactions (in each case, often involving complex intercreditor and participation structures), letters of credit, asset-based and cash flow-based financings, first and second lien financings, fund subscription financings and leveraged acquisitions.

Howard has also represented international and domestic clients in a broad range of corporate and financing transactions, including the purchase and sale of distressed businesses and the financing of such transactions, debt workouts and restructurings, public offerings, private placements of equity and debt, venture capital transactions, and mergers and acquisitions.
