

Justin D. Goldberg

ASSOCIATE

jgoldberg@mosessinger.com

212. 554. 7636

Justin Goldberg helps high net-worth individuals and families develop tax-efficient estate planning and wealth transfer solutions. He draws on his understanding of the court system and prior litigation experience to keep probate and estate administration proceedings moving forward in a timely fashion.

Justin provides clear and succinct advice to help clients gain a full picture of their tax liability when planning for estate transfers and lifetime gift transfers. He focuses on accomplishing their unique goals for family succession and wealth transfers, through wills, irrevocable trusts, revocable trusts, and charitable giving.

Justin's experience in court helps keep probate matters on track, and, if litigation arises, he supports quick resolutions with fiduciary oversight.

Justin frequently volunteers at the Planning and Estates Law Project (PELP) clinic, which is associated with the NYCBA. PELP offers free legal assistance with estate planning, probate and other various estate matters to New York City residents with limited resources. He is a member of the New York City Bar Association, Legal History Committee; and a member of the Historical Society of the New York Courts, Young Lawyers Committee.

Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome.

Education

- Elisabeth Haub School of Law (J.D., cum laude)
- University of Massachusetts Amherst (B.A. in History)

Bar/Court Admissions

- New York

Practices / Industries

- Private Clients
- Trusts & Estates
- Philanthropy and Charitable Organizations

Professional Affiliations

Member of the New York City Bar Association, Legal History Committee.

Member of the New York City Bar Association, Trusts, Estates & Surrogates Courts Committee.

Publications

January 20, 2026

Justin Goldberg and Dan Hoffman Authored an Article Titled, "New Baby Starter Kit," Which Appeared in the New York Law Journal